

ISO 9001:2015 Transition Offering Developed By The Certification Industry, Available For You

Ever wondered what training and assessment the certification and registration industry uses for international standards? Would you like to be trained and assessed using the same offering?

The International Association of Accredited Registrars (IAAR) has released an online offering to provide information on the requirements of the Draft/DIS ISO 9001:2015 International Standard.

The offering was built by the members of IAAR, being the registrars who provide certification to the Standard. This is unique in that the collective expertise of the industry has come together to create an online offering that satisfies their needs and that of their customers and accreditation bodies.

This is the first time, globally, that you can participate in a course and assessment that has the collective wisdom of the certification industry.

Those completing the training will gain an understanding of the changes in the upcoming revision and how these could affect their organization's quality management system.

Note: The Standard is still undergoing review and may be subject to change before its release to an International Standard.

This offering was developed and is supported by PECB and Exemplar Global, leaders in personnel certification.

▼ THE OFFER

The course is offered online, is modular and is self paced. There are seven competency domains to guide through the fundamentals of the standards and how to transition:
